

EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

Communication is the key to ensuring the safety of students, faculty, and staff during an emergency. This involves effectively providing information to you as well as monitoring developing events in a rapidly changing environment.

How We Plan to Communicate with You:

Centre College has several channels through which information will be made available to during an emergency, including:

- The Rave Alert notification system
- The Centre College home page

What You Can Do:

- If you are faculty/staff, register for Rave Alert through Centrenet. Students are automatically registered.
- Review information regarding emergency procedures for Danville and Centre College.
- Review the safety tips on the Department of Public Safety webpage.
- Remain calm and go about your normal activities.
- Be alert to suspicious activity, and be prepared if the worst happens.
 - If you notice unusual activity or something that doesn't look quite right, report it to the Department of Public Safety at (859) 236-4357.
- Be alert for news and instructions.
- Pay special attention to physical security (do not prop doors open; lock doors that have access to sensitive areas such as residence halls, laboratories, computer equipment, etc.).
- Make it a practice to communicate with friends and family about your daily schedule and plans.
- Review suggestions from other organizations listed on the DPS webpage, and in our other guides.

Rave Alert:

As part of its comprehensive emergency response plan, Centre College has partnered with Rave Mobile Safety in order to create a mass notification system for major emergency situations. Rave Alert enables the Centre College Department of Public Safety to quickly send out critical safety alerts and instructions via e-mail, text, and voice messages to the entire campus in major emergency situations. Students are automatically registered for Rave Alert, and faculty and staff may register online through Centrenet.
